

Offers to property owners affected by RADTIP

The City of Asheville has worked with contracted appraisal groups and the NC Department of Transportation to appraise properties and make offers to owners based on taken land, easements, damages and the value of buildings and other improvements.

The RADTIP infrastructure improvement project affects 50 properties. Of those, 38 are represented here. Of the remaining 12, several already belong to the City of Asheville. The others belong to railroad companies and are part of a different process.

A selection of information from the appraisals is below. The offer column (far right) indicates the city's offer to the owner. These offers are often negotiated, so they don't necessarily represent the sum the owners actually will receive.

The price per acre (center) provides a basis for comparing the appraisals. It is based on the value of land alone. Any buildings, fencing, parking lots or other improvements on the property are evaluated separately. Their value is noted in a separate column (second from right). The city rarely takes a full acre or more. The amount of land the city is taking is noted in the acreage column (second from left).

The acreage and improvements columns do not add up to the offer column in most cases. That's because the city also offers money for easements and damages. Those details are not reproduced here, but they are available in the appraisals, which the Citizen-Times obtained through a public records request.
